Rationale The initial rationale for excluding 4LS students was that since the course is 1000 level and designed as an introduction to career development in the liberal arts and sciences, seniors would not benefit as much from the course. However, this turned out to be flawed for two reasons. First, many students that are coded in the system as 4LS are NOT in fact seniors, and are often simply students that brought a large amount of credits to UF from high school. Second, the seniors who have taken the course have given extremely positive feedback, indicated that it was indeed very valuable to them, and their presence in the course was very beneficial to the younger students as well. For these reasons, I propose changing the prerequisite to include ALL students coded LS so that any student in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences may register for the course.
