

Undergraduate Academic Assessment Plan

Interdisciplinary Studies
Concentration: Film and Media Studies

CLAS

Contact Name & email

Barbara Mennel

mennel@ufl.edu

Interdisciplinary Studies Concentration: Film and Media Studies Undergraduate Academic Assessment Plan

Mission Statement

Enter your mission statement here. See page 2 of the “Developing an Undergraduate Academic Assessment Plan” guide.

Current Mission Statement:

The interdisciplinary studies major in film and media studies provides you with knowledge of film in its diversity and through its techniques. You will learn film theory and criticism and implement these ideas in the practice of viewing and/or making films. You will also present ideas clearly and effectively in writing and/or in film/video format as an optional ability.

Revised Mission Statement:

The interdisciplinary studies major in film and media studies provides you with knowledge of film and/or interactive media in its diversity and through its techniques. You will learn film and/or media theory and criticism and implement these ideas in the practice of viewing and/or making films and/or interactive texts. You will also present ideas clearly and effectively in a film/video, interactive text, or well-argued essay.

Student Learning Outcomes (SLOs)

Enter SLOs here, or link to your program’s SLOs online found here. See page 3 of the “Developing an Undergraduate Academic Assessment Plan” guide. Guidance for revising SLOs can also be found on the Institutional Assessment website.

Link to current SLOs:

<https://catalog.ufl.edu/ugrad/current/liberalarts/alc/film-and-media-studies.aspx>

Revised SLOs:

1. Know film and/or interactive media in its diversity and through its techniques.
2. Know film and/or media theory and criticism, and implement these in the practice of viewing and/or making films and/or interactive texts.
3. Present ideas clearly and effectively in a film, interactive text, or in a well-argued essay.

Curriculum Map

See page 3 of the “Developing an Undergraduate Academic Assessment Plan” guide.

Curriculum Map for:

Program _____ College _____

Key: Introuced Reinforced Assessed

Courses SLOs	Course1	Course2	Course3	Course4	Course5	Course6	Course7	Additional Assessments
Content Knowledge
#1
#2
Critical Thinking
#3
#4
Communication
#5
#6

Narrative about Film and Media Studies concentration of Interdisciplinary Studies in the College of Liberal Arts and Sciences

The Film and Media Studies (FMS) concentration of Interdisciplinary Studies (IDS) at the University of Florida offers unique and individualized course of study for undergraduate students to major in Film and Media Studies. Students combine different courses from different existing majors in an individualized interdisciplinary curriculum, for which they chose from courses listed on the IDS website according to advising by the Director of the Center for Film and Media Studies. Students may select courses from Art History, Anthropology, English, Theatre Arts, and Languages, Literatures, and Cultures, for example. Typical interdisciplinary combinations for the FMS concentration include English and Fine Arts, but also Religion, Dance, Anthropology, Communication, and Jewish Studies, for example.

FMS in IDS is application-based and highly selective with few students applying and even fewer students gaining admittance. The Director for the Center for Film and Media Studies advises students who intend to apply to the FMS concentration in IDS. In my experience as Director the admission rate has been about 70% over the last two years, but is increasing with advising selecting courses for individualized curricula and the application process. On average, about 2-5 students apply per year and 2-3 get accepted. Instead of a set curriculum, the FMS/IDS website includes early courses recommended for applicants, in which they would gain the skills for the major (SLOs 1 and 2). Advising gears students toward necessary courses to create their individualized course of study.

Students are eligible to apply once they have accumulated 60 credits and transfer students have established a UF GPA. As the Director, I advise application during the fourth or fifth semester. The application includes a list courses of a minimum of 20 and maximum of 23 credit hours, which constitute the individualized core curriculum, which is also assessed by the IDS committee. This individualized core curriculum is then tracked by the IDS staff in CLAS. An applicant also needs two sponsors, professors from two different departments, who are qualified to advise the student's final project and endorse it in letters of recommendations that are part of the application process. Most importantly, the student has to develop a final project, with which s/he applies to FMS to IDS. The application includes a project description of the student's intended final project. FMS IDS students most often make a film, but they can also produce an extensive research paper, an extensive screen play, a film with accompanying short research paper, or, for example, an interactive text of comparable complexity and scholarly rigor, or a choreography of a dance performance that integrates a film they have produced. The student completes his or her project under the supervision of his/her main sponsor in IDS 4906, seven credits of independent study, traditionally taken in the student's last academic year. The application is evaluated by the IDS committee, headed by the Assistant Dean of CLAS Margaret Fields and which includes five faculty members from across CLAS who oversee established concentrations in IDS.

Criteria for the assessment of students' IDS applications include: GPA (minimum: 3.0), grades in courses which constitute the IDS major, student's academic trajectory and future goals, the project's scholarly and artistic merit, quality of research, clarity of writing, and feasibility, and the level of endorsement and assessment of the student and his/her project in two letters of recommendation. The project and degree must exceed a regular existing major or double major. Possible decisions include: one, unconditional acceptance, two, conditional acceptance, three, revise and resubmit, and four, rejection. Once a student is accepted, s/he follows his or her outlined individual core curriculum and completes 7 credits of IDS 4906, in which s/he completes the outlined final project. The acceptance letter will include a statement that students will have to submit their final project to the Director of FMS for academic program assessment. The assessment of the SLOs will be based on work completed in IDS 4906 with the final project representing the sum of the student's individual course of study.

Assessment Cycle

Enter Text here. See page 6 of the “Developing an Undergraduate Academic Assessment Plan” guide.

Because of the small number of FMS IDS students, all students' work and all SLOs will be assessed each year.

Assessment Cycle Chart

Assessment Cycle for: Interdisciplinary Studies: Concentration: Film and Media Studies

Program _____ College _____

Analysis and Interpretation: May-June (beginning cycle: 2013)
 Improvement Actions: Completed by August (beginning cycle: 2013)
 Dissemination: Completed by September (beginning cycle: 2013)

SLOs	Year	10-11	11-12	12-13	13-14	14-15	15-16
Content Knowledge
#1 Know film and/or interactive media in its diversity and through its techniques				X	X	X	X
Critical Thinking
#2 Know film and/or media theory and criticism, and implement these in the practice of viewing and/or making films and/or interactive texts.				X	X	X	X
Communication
#3 Present ideas clearly and effectively in a film, interactive text, or well-argued essay.				x	x	x	x

Methods and Procedures

Enter text here. See page 7 of the “Developing an Undergraduate Academic Assessment Plan” guide.

Assessment of portfolio of work produced in IDS 4906, where all 3 SLOs are met. The work consists of either a film, interactive text, or an extensive research essay or a film and accompanying essay, depending on the student’s proposal on the basis of which s/he was accepted into IDS.

Academic Learning Compact – Interdisciplinary Studies (IDS)

(College of Liberal Arts and Sciences) Concentration in Film and Media Studies (FMS)

Evaluation of Portfolio

Name _____ Term _____

Class _____

Assessed by Committee of two Members (Director of Center for Film and Media Studies and additional member of IDS FMS faculty) _____ and _____

SLO	Excellent	Good	Basic	Rudimentary	Insufficient	POINTS
1 Content Know film and/or interactive media in its diversity and through its techniques (20%)	Demonstrates profound knowledge of the national and historical diversity of film and media, the technical and formal features, and the vocabulary of Film and Media Studies. [20-15 points]	Demonstrates considerable knowledge of the national and historical diversity of film and media and the technical and formal features and vocabulary of Film and Media Studies. [14-10 points]	Demonstrates some knowledge of the national and historical diversity of film and media and the technical and formal features and vocabulary of Film and Media Studies. [9-5 points]	Demonstrates only piecemeal knowledge of the national and historical diversity of film and media and the technical and formal features and vocabulary of Film and Media Studies. [4-1 points]	Unable to demonstrate coherent knowledge of the national and historical diversity of film and media and the technical and formal features and vocabulary of Film and Media Studies. [0 points]
2 Critical Thinking Know film and media theory and criticism, and implement these ideas in the practice of viewing and/or making film and/or interactive text. (20%)	Excellent command of an overview of history of film and media theory and criticism. Excellent ability to apply different theoretical approaches to the analysis of film and/or making a film and/or interactive text. (see SLO 3) [20-15 points]	Good command of an overview of history of film and media theory and criticism. Good ability to apply different theoretical approaches to the analysis of film and/or making a film and/or interactive text. (see SLO 3) [14-10 points]	Only moderate command of an overview of history of film and media theory and criticism. Moderate ability to apply different theoretical approaches to the analysis of film and/or making a film and/or interactive text. (see SLO 3) [9-5 points]	Minimal command of an overview of history of film and media theory and criticism. Limited ability to apply different theoretical approaches to the analysis of film and/or making a film and/or interactive text. (see SLO 3) [4-1 points]	Shows no command of an overview of history of film and media theory and criticism. Lack of ability to apply different theoretical approaches to the analysis of film and/or making a film and/or interactive text. (see SLO 3) [0 points]
3 Communication Present ideas clearly and effectively in a film or interactive text or well-argued essay. (60%)	Film or interactive text: Excellent execution based on mastery in technical, artistic, and scholarly areas. Or: Well-argued essay: Excellent scholarly	Film or interactive text: Good execution reflecting minor deficiencies in technical, artistic, and scholarly areas. Or: Well-argued essay: Good scholarly	Film or interactive text: Moderate execution based on deficiencies in technical, artistic, and scholarly areas. Or: Well-argued essay: Moderate	Film or interactive text: Weak execution based on major deficiencies in technical, artistic, and scholarly areas. Or: Well-argued essay: Weak argument,	Film or interactive text: Highly flawed as a result of extreme deficiencies in technical, artistic, and scholarly areas. Or: Well-argued essay: Incoherent

	argument, thorough research, well-written. [60-50 points]	argument, sufficient research evidence, and acceptable writing. [49-30 points]	argument, some research evidence, and compromised writing. [29-10 points]	insufficient research, problems in writing. [9-1 points]	argument, no research evidence, significant problems in writing. [0 points]
TOTAL						___/100

Assessment Oversight

See page 7 of the “Developing an Undergraduate Academic Assessment Plan” guide.

Name	Department Affiliation	Email Address	Phone Number
Barbara Mennel	English/LLC/Director, Center for Film and Media Studies	mennel@ufl.edu	(352) 294-2820

The Director for the Center for Film and Media Studies is responsible for assessment oversight. The Director serves a three-year term, and my term ends at the end of AY 2012-13. The work will be assessed by a committee of two, which will include the Director of FMS and one additional faculty member of FMS in IDS.