Dear instructor,

The University of Florida (UF) has partnered with the International Center for Academic Integrity to help us learn more about our culture of academic integrity, and how that compares to other colleges and universities in the country.

We invite you to complete a +/- 25 minute survey to help us learn more about your attitudes and behaviors relating to upholding academic integrity. The survey asks about how you design courses and learning experiences such as assignments and/or exams, how and where you learned about your institution's academic integrity policies, and how you respond or would respond if you discovered a breach of academic integrity in a course you were teaching.

Your answers will remain completely anonymous. We don't record any identifying information about research participants; no one from UF or the International Center for Academic Integrity will ever know which responses are yours.

There will be benchmarking of aggregate responses from UF with the rest of our national sample, and we plan to publish results from this benchmarking data.

Thank you in advance,
